Let's Start!

Too many tough questions!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Have you ever left an interview and felt that it went badly? What happened?
- What have you learned from past interviews that you can use in future ones?

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss future plans.
- I can report what someone had previously said.
- I can talk about events and experiences related to a job.

Let's Explore!

Adam and Joe talk about a nightmare interview experience.

* A "nightmare" is a very bad dream. It is also used to describe any bad experience.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Adam: Hi Joe!

Joe: Hi Adam, how's it going?

Adam: Not bad, I'm still job hunting. Next week, I will be going to an interview for a freelance journalist position. I will have been to four different interviews in two weeks, but no luck so far. How about you?

Joe: Same. I have another interview next week. I hope it goes better than the last one. What an ordeal. It was a nightmare interview!

Adam: Why? What happened?

Joe: The interview was for a job in marketing in the airline industry. The interview was scheduled for 14:00, which in international time is 2:00 p.m. I was running late so I was very rushed. I ended up wearing two different shoes. I didn't comb my hair or iron my shirt.

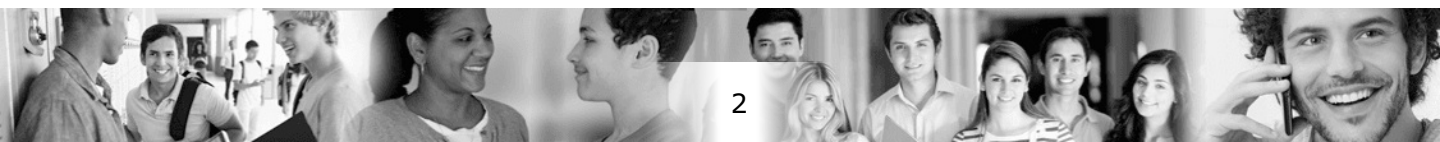

Adam: Oh, man.

Joe: It only gets worse. I arrived just on time, or what I thought was just on time. It turns out the recruiter made a mistake. He said he thought the interview was scheduled for 4:00 p.m. He said the president wasn't free until then, so I had to wait 2 hours.

Adam: Oh, that's too bad.

Joe: That's not all. Then, during the interview, the COO asked me a lot of unusual questions I wasn't prepared for. He asked me what my greatest weakness was. I'll have to think of a good answer for that one for the future. Then he asked me why the references I gave them had incorrect phone numbers. That didn't look very good. He also asked me what I thought about the company mission statement, which I didn't know. I'm going to make sure I do a lot more research before my next interview. I'll read everything I can find on the company website. I'll think about answers to those tough questions! And I'm updating the phone numbers of my references tonight!

Adam: I'm going to do the same thing.

Let's Practice!

What did they say?

Instructions: Draw a line to match the sentences in Column A and Column B.

COLUMN A

1. The recruiter said
2. He said the president
3. He asked me
4. Then he asked me why
5. He also asked me what

COLUMN B

- a. the references I gave them had incorrect phone numbers.
- b. he thought the interview was scheduled for 4:00 p.m.
- c. I thought about the company mission statement.
- d. wasn't free until then, so I had to wait 2 hours.
- e. what my greatest weakness was.

Let's Practice!

What an ordeal! Joe talks about his interview experience.

Instructions: Read and circle the correct words to complete the sentences.

What an ordeal / or deal / order . It was a nightmare / night mare / nine mare interview! The interview was for a job in marketing in the air line / airline / airlines industry. The interview was scheduling / scheduled / schedule for 14:00. I was running late so I was very rush / rushed / rusing /. I ended up / ended down / end wearing two different shoes. Learning Points

The Future with Will, Going to and the Present Continuous Tense

There are different ways to talk about the future - you can use the modal verb will, the structure be going to or the Present Continuous tense. Each of these elements has its own use.

Refer to the chart for an outline of the use and the structure of each of these:

Structure	Use	Example
Will	When you make a decision at the moment of speaking for the future or make predictions about the future	I'll have to think of a good answer for that one for the future.
Be Going To	When you talk about intentions	I'm going to make sure I do a lot more research before my next interview.
Present Continuous	When you talk about things that are arranged, on the agenda or booked for the future	And I'm updating the phone numbers of my references tonight!

Examples:

- I'm going to make sure I do a lot more research before my next interview.
- I'll read everything I can find on the company website.
- I'll think about answers to those tough questions!
- I'm updating the phone numbers of my references tonight!

Learning Points

The Future Continuous and Future Perfect Tenses

When you want to talk about the future and you want to refer to an action that will be in progress at a certain time in the future, you use the Future Continuous tense. You use the Future Perfect tense to talk about something that be complete by a certain time in the future.

Future Continuous structure:

will (not) + be + verb-ing

For example:

Next week, I will be going to an interview for a freelance journalist position.

Future Perfect structure:

will + have + past participle

For example:

I will have been to four different interviews in two weeks, but no luck so far.

Examples:

- Next week, I will be going to an interview for a freelance journalist position.
- Tomorrow, I will be thinking of you doing your presentation.
- On Friday, my sister will be applying for a job in the same company.
- I will have been to four different interviews in two weeks, but no luck so far.
- By next week, we will have come up with a better name for the project.
- By the end of the month, the company will have hired 10 new employees.
